

YOU.ARE.VITAL.

What is it?

The Faculty Vitality Survey[®] is a short survey designed specifically for faculty in the health professions. It can be combined with our Department Chair 360[°] Survey[®] to provide a robust picture of the vitality of your faculty, administrators, and institution.

Since 2006, over 2,000 faculty from nine schools have participated in the survey.

What does it measure?

The self-report survey contains demographic variables (gender, race/ethnicity, academic rank, track) and subscales measuring perceptions of institutional climate & leadership, career & life management, satisfaction, engagement, and productivity.

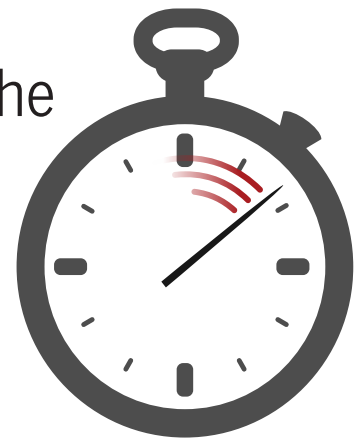

What do you receive?

Participating schools are provided with results benchmarked against other institutions. You are also invited to participate in a conference regarding the implications for faculty development.

How can you use the data?

Data can be used to inform policy, recruitment and retention, and faculty development programming. Armed with this information, you can use your resources more effectively to develop a systematic approach to faculty and organizational development.

The Faculty Vitality Survey[®] measures more than just job satisfaction. It examines the synergy between satisfaction, productivity, and engagement. Our goal is to better understand the experiences of faculty to ultimately improve the faculty experience.
