Position Announcement

Chair, Department of Radiology and Imaging Sciences
Indiana University School of Medicine

The Indiana University School of Medicine is seeking a visionary academic leader to serve as Chair of Radiology and Imaging Sciences. The successful candidate should have a strong background in academic leadership, research, clinical service, and teaching. Experience should include evidence of effective communication, mentorship, and change management. The candidate should be poised to lead the department to a higher level of excellence.

The Department of Radiology is home to over 100 radiologists, 25 researchers, and more than 80 residents and fellows. Extensive clinical and research dedicated facilities include advanced MRI, PET/CT and radiochemistry instrumentation and support including animal imaging. Radiologic services are provided to fifteen Indiana University Health facilities and affiliated partners across the state, as well as Eskenazi Health and the Richard L. Roudebush VA Medical Center. Indiana University Health, the state’s largest and most comprehensive healthcare system, was just named (for the second year) to the U.S. News and World Report Honor Roll.

The IU School of Medicine is located in Indianapolis and has nine campuses across the state, educating the second-largest medical student body in the U.S.

Indianapolis is the 12th largest city in the United States and is growing and thriving economically due to a strong corporate base anchored by the life sciences. Indiana is home to one of the largest concentrations of health sciences companies in the nation, which contribute over $44 billion annually to its economy. The vibrant downtown is a bustling commercial center, entertainment destination, and residential neighborhood. The expanding residential base is driven by rich amenities and quality of life – the city is home to a variety of professional sports, arts venues and outdoor recreation areas.
